MRS. ABBIE STUBER SUCCEUMBS SUDDENLY

Short Illness Fatal to Active Member of St. Mary's Catholic Church

Mrs. Abbie M. Stuber 65 died suddenly of a heart attack this morning at her home at 229 North Prospect street. Mrs. Stuber was the last two weeks at the hospital returning home Sunday night. She was taken ill this morning and died in a short time.

Mrs. Stuber was an active member of St. Mary's Catholic Church until two years ago when her health began to fail. She was a member of the St. Mary Altar Society.

Surviving her is her husband, Leo Stuber and their children, Mrs. W. H. Gander of 31 West Center street, Mrs. J. J. Gander of 1401 E. 1st street and Ed of Marion. (Call of Akron and the funeral home of St. Mary's parish, Washington, O. She was the last member of the family.

Mrs. Stuber was born Oct. 1, 1873 in Gallia to the late Joseph and Mary Stuber. Her marriage took place in 1893 and four sons, Leo, Mr. and Mrs. Stuber moved to Marion. Time of the epidemic was a hard one for her. She was the last member of the family.

NEW LINCOLN CARS ON DISPLAY HERE

Three Models at 1st and Garage in First Showing Here

A special showing of new Lincoln cars models is under way at the Ford garage, 519 23rd East Center street. Ed C. Watters, local dealer, announced today.

Three models including a 1-cylinder seven passenger sedan, an eight-cylinder seven passenger sedan and an eight-cylinder five passenger sedan are on display today and will continue in the show room Wednesday and Thursday. Mr. Watters said.

The showing is in charge of J. K. Jolley, manager of the Lincoln division of the Columbus branch of the Ford Motor Co. He will remain in Marion while the cars are on display.

OPEN MEET IS HELD BY BROTHERHOOD

The annual open meeting of the Brotherhood of the United Brethren church last night drew a large attendance of members and their families and friends. The community house was filled to capacity for the potluck supper which preceded a program in the church parlors.

Rev. J. H. Patterson of Mt. Gilman addressed the group on Americanism. An American Legion quartet from Piquette entertained with a group of vocal and instrumental numbers and Mr. DeLong played several new selections.

The July and August meetings of the Brotherhood will be held at the Otterbein L. B. park at Newmans.

RAY HAMILTON HURT IN ARENA ACCIDENT

Ray Ham Hamilton suffered an eye injury last night while removing the canvas from the ring in the outdoor arena at the Stearns Street Athletic field. A truck driver slipped off a rail and cut one of Hamilton's eyes below the pupil. His right eye is not expected to be impaired.

Deny Non-Support.

Edward L. Early of Cleveland and Len Early of Bucyrus were seen leaving in their own car yesterday afternoon after pleading not guilty to a non-support charge. The two were arrested on charge of having failed to contribute toward the support of their father, William L. Early, since the first of January. Their hearing has been set for 9 a. m. on Saturday.

Injured at Work

John H. Hinkley of 327 Lincoln avenue, caretaker of the city house was temporarily disabled this morning when the splint nerve of his right leg was injured while he was working under the boiler of the city house heating plant. He was taken to his home by Probate Judge Oscar Carl and given first aid by Mrs. J. H. Travis, county health nurse.

THE RIGHT MAN CHOSEN.

In the election of the new chairman of the Marion chapter of the American Legion, George A. Bowman was chosen. His name and influence in the community are well known and his selection is a tribute to his leadership and the support of the community.

As head of the city, Bowman is in a position to know first-hand the urgent need of a permanent contribution of funds for the upkeep of Marion's welfare and relief work. He comes in actual contact with families of the city through the children and understands their problems thoroughly. He knows from his work in the schools that numerous parents have experienced tremendous difficulty in keeping their boys and girls adequately equipped with necessities of life during the last year. He could tell beyond doubt of actual cases of want that certainly would loosen all purse strings in Marion for the relief of the needy.

It is fortunate that as chairman of this campaign a man whose life work is devoted to the welfare and unbuilding of poor people has been chosen. For it is with the interests of Marion's boys and girls that the community finds it largely centered. They are the ones who suffer most from lack of resources for maintenance of proper living conditions.

The community fund, though it is maintained and operated for the benefit of all young and old, it is by far the best plan for relief and welfare work in Marion that has ever been devised and it is of utmost importance that in this approaching campaign citizens give it the most liberal backing within their means.

For Security's Sake

It is almost an implicit reminder in these troubled days when 10 place figures and specters of punitive taxation occupy the national scene, but the world disarmament conference is still at work trying to lift some of the burden of armament cost from the taxpayer's galled back. Removal of one battleship (initial cost $40,000,000, annual upkeep $2,000,000, repairs and improvements unestimated cost over 20 years a quarter of a billion)—would represent no mean achievement.

The conference which has been struggling in the quicksand of nationalism since last February represents a challenge to faith that the seemingly impossible may somehow be accomplished. The challenge warning was given in advance, would not be accepted. It has not been accepted. The only surprise that can come out of the conference now is any progress toward disarmament, however small. From the opening speech it has been obvious that nations are going to insist on the right to establish security for themselves in their own various ways.

Germany, the only large nation in the world whose people are free from a heavy burden of armament cost has demonstrated many times in the last few months that it considers freedom mockery in the presence of a national feeling of insecurity. Disarmament is resented because it was involuntary. On the other side of its most important national boundary lies France armed to the teeth but no less afraid of what may happen than her now powerless neighbor. For security's sake France spends millions. For security's sake impoverished Germany would welcome the opportunity to spend as much and more.

It is only one case. The disarmament conference passes from it to many others equally perplexing. The great nations are spending more than half again as much on armament as they did the year before the war plunged the world into chaos and no course of reasoning has yet been devised to convince them that there can be a better way to satisfy their demand for security. Russia the mother of capitalism says: Disarm. France says: Turn over aggressive weapons to the League of Nations. Germany realizing the impossibility of the suggestion says: Do as you have forced us to do. The United States says: Abolish aggressive weapons and one by one police refusals are given to each and every plan.

The United States spends enough on national defense and care of its former soldiers in one year to run its government. This expense is destined to increase steadily for an indefinite period. The people pay for relief from taxation. How strange that they pay so rarely in translated into a mass objection against the crushing cost of armament.

With the Paragaphers

Here's the Original Economy Team. D. B. Miller and Sheriff Peter W. Hatcher. They are in accord in many valuable ways. Miller is a frugal person. Sheriff Hatcher has a right to live and his friend only a left. They wear the same shoe size and admire the same style. This could lead to just one result and that is friends are not ashamed to do their shopping at either St. Louis Club or Miller's.

Two Ways of Looking at It. Finland explains a situation in that country had to do with prohibition. In this world the Finns figured that if they better abolish prohibition before prohibition abolished them. This helps in inquiry.

Why Should We Help the Teachers? One of the greatest of all things which they certainly teach is to let Europe's finance talk—N. Clark O. Redicker Herald.

Talent Will Be in Demand. The genius who can conceal a scintilla plank with a single figure ought to find business good in Chicago—Washington Post.

Both Difficult to Understand. But it's difficult to say to an American in the United States that he is a "Finnish" for ladies' dresses more important than the Manhattan station. Let's say they are in the ladies' class with all the more man to say—The Hamlet Spectator.

An Idea on Making Fanta Last Longer. In Chicago, where it was purging his pants on his arm and head of lantern in his hand. Officers told him that he suspected the man of drinking. He was a man of enough—The Savannah Banner.

Daily Guide to Health

BY DR. ROYAL S. COLFAND

Going Barefoot Cause of Hookworm

For many years little was known about hookworm. The direct cause was unknown. It is often referred to as the germ of laziness because its victims have no pep or strength. They show definite signs of backwashedness and have low resistance to disease.

It was estimated at one time that more than 35 per cent of school children in the South had this disease and though the disease is not as prevalent as formerly a recent publication announces that hookworm victims are still to be found in some States.

Hookworm is caused by small worms which enter the body through the skin which the circulation and eventually are carried to the intestine. There they burrow into the walls of the intestine and do severe damage to the health of the individual before they are eliminated.

In 1925 the Rockefeller Sanitary Commission discovered that the disease could be prevented. To accomplish this they found it necessary to instruct the public in personal hygiene and the dangers of walking about barefoot.

Unkarma Americana is the scientific name of the worm that causes this disease. It is often referred to as the germ of laziness because its victims have no pep or strength. They show definite signs of backwashedness and have low resistance to disease.

At first this complaint of minor stomach disturbances. These symptoms disappear upon the taking of food. There is a yearning for odd articles of diet such as clay, dirt, resin, chalk and hair, because eating these substances gives relief and comfort.

The hookworm sufferer has a pale complexion, is thin and undernourished. He complains of breathlessness, loss of appetite, and is generally mentally dull and physically unfit for any kind of work.

AN EXECUTION IN 1875

In the early days of Ohio when executions were public and no step out of the night by publicists and to a large number of people, it was the custom to have a funeral of the condemned man. It was a solemn and impressive affair.

The public in national convention in 1875 began in Chicago. It was the first time that a large number of delegates from all over the country were present.

When he President soon there after he had drafted him to get the reconstruction unit running. Dawes agreed to devote his conspicuous financial abilities to the government again but with the understanding he said that he would be released when his work was properly established. Word was received from the White House as to who would be chosen to take his place as president of the corporation. The phrasing of Dawes' letter indicated he had waited until the new revenue measure had passed its congressional hazards and the government's financial solidity had been reestablished. He pointed out that the reconstruction corporation was now well launched in its operations properly administered and effective.

Gambler's Throw

by Eustace L. Adams

The palm trees themselves seemed to find the oppressive heat unbearable as they drooped and browned and weaned. Their glistening leaves gave little shade and less rest to the weary, panting only to accentuate the glare of the brass sky and the burnished indifference of the flattened sea.

A girl stood in a tiny patch of shade at one end of the porch, staring from the all-embracing heat. She was young and beautiful with the straight slender figure of a boy. For the thousandth time she studied the acres of palms to north and south, then turned her gaze toward the sharply edged segments of horses' hooves between the two islands to the west. The flash of hope that always lit up those brown eyes when she began her frequent surveys faded into hopelessness.

She leaned against the porch railing, forgetting everything but the heat and the ever growing tension in the house. Those little patches of mangrove-colored sand might never know the touch of human foot nor those shimmering waters the splash of paddle or beat of propeller. The twenty acres and upon which the house stood seemed utterly lost amid an uninhabited archipelago of island dots in the madhouse of which this porch was a part might burst into flame and disintegrate under the torrid heat together with its own part of desperate man and the outside world might never know she shivered although the very air scorched her like the blast from an open door.

An hour more before the maelstrom sun would drive into the sea with tropic haste. Then one would be able to breathe. The tension which bound the island like an iron band would relax. The men would become almost normal, remembering their stations in life before they were set down on this sun-baked, hate mad spot.

Enjoying herself, Nancy, a girl whose voice came from behind her shoulder. She wheeled her hand on her breast.

Are you drunk again, Mr. Mallory? she challenged him coldly.

Mallory, towering unsteadily on his feet, his jade green eyes bloodshot, his broad shoulders sagged wearily. Lack of exercise and too much drink was taking its toll upon a figure which had but three weeks ago been lithe and hard muscled. Here there were no polo fields with spirited ponies and pretty women no hand ball courts with showers and experienced rubbers no golf links with frosted highballs at the nineteenth hole. Of all these only two were left, the highballs and one pretty woman.

So to both he had devoted himself assiduously, the drink without restraint, the woman to the limits of his patience. Now he stared openly at Nancy and smiled.

Not drunk yet, he said. Perhaps a little later. His mood changed suddenly. His irritable voice betrayed a man whose nerves were frayed and jangling. What else would one do to help him forget the passing of time in this hell hole? Hamilton with his blameworthy golfing, Martin sitting there like a bump on a log until you could smash his face in just to make him speak. Williams stealing every chance to make a calf's eye at you.

Lured the gunman pacing back and forth like a panther in his cage. And every time we take a walk toward the beach or the hangar two or three guards watch us with their hands in their bulging pockets hoping that we'll do something that will give them a little gun practice. If you weren't here I'd have run amuck long ago. I will yet if something doesn't happen to break the monotony.

That will be very helpful to me. The girl's voice was heavy with sarcasm. You fill me with admiration for your self control.

"See here, Nancy," he complained. "It's all your fault. You know I've been myself. I'm madly in love with you and you treat me like a dog. I've loved you ever since your opening night at the Criterion two years ago. I've tried God knows how many times to get you. But you never went out on parties with me. People and now were together here. I can't think of anything but you."

She countered a corollary, but the heat and the liquor and the chances of escape. Have you given any thought to your life lately?"

"Yes," she said. "I've thought about it. I've thought about my wife and I have been separated for years. I'll have her get a divorce the moment we return to New York."

New York. A million miles away from his madhouse. It hardly needed to be said.

She might be a favor to your wife and a disaster to me, but please let's talk of something else."

Nancy's voice was vibrant with intensity. "I want to have a baby."

In another instant she was in his arms, kicking hammering with her little feet at his chest and shoulders squirming silently to break his hold. His knees fell under her. A guard strolling along the bench stopped and watched them in front of his eyes.

She was sick and dizzy. Then suddenly she felt rather than heard a sharp ringing crack. The straining arm sagged at his body relaxed. He fell limp and settled down on the floor. She was dragged down with him. Strong hands seized her by the shoulders and pulled her back to her feet.

"Heart of a Wife"

By ADRIAN GARRISON

ILLIAN Directs the Hunt for Amy (Clue to the Missing Girl)

LILLIAN held my breath as the taxi with Ronald at the wheel crawled slowly, up the road that Lillian had directed him to take. But I kept my eyes fixed upon my wife of the road knowing that Lillian and Mary also were watching intently for what? Neither Mary nor I knew but when we reached the two mile limit when Lillian and I spoke rapidly almost breathlessly while Ronald was turning the car.

If this is the road the kidnapper took, she said and I noticed that her throat contracted at the dread word. Lillian would suspect something was wrong as soon as they turned into it and would set her wife to work to leave some trace of their journey with the man being aware of her doing so. I hope she had presence of mind enough not to voice her suspicions before she blazed her trail.

Now we must keep our eyes open for the thinnest thing blown among the bushes or ground into the dust of the road. A handkerchief a branch a torn piece of scarf or dress a piece of paper with something scrawled on it anything the girl may have worn or have had in her hands—these are the things for which we must look.

I had known really what she meant to tell me but putting it into words seemed to bring concretely before me the sinister problem we were facing. Some where in these hills Lillian believed that her daughter and Carolyn were being held prisoners. We were yearning for any painful little clue that the ingenuity of two nervously frightened girls might have fashioned.

I had to encourage my courage to keep from screaming out my terror. I saw Mary shaking as with an urge as she began to search the underbrush and knew that she shared my hysteria.

The Search is Futile

For the night of Lillian white tipped but rain beginning a systematic search of one side of the road as coolly as if she were looking for a lost key.

LOUISE: I check up on my soaps these days—see this list?

NELL: My, it looks long—what is it?

LOUISE: 570 pieces—lingerie and stockings and fine things—washed with 1 box of LUX! LUX goes further than any other soap I ever used and it keeps my underthings and stockings new ever so much longer. Here's my list:

- 40 pairs silk stockings
- 84 lace hosiery

- 18 pairs children's hosiery
- 40 pairs children's socks
- 40 pairs men's socks
- 18 chemise
- 12 negligees
- 18 nightgowns
- 84 pairs children's underwear
- 40 men's handkerchiefs
- 40 white handkerchiefs

LUX keeps lingerie and stockings like new she said her mind evidently over seeing every slightest detail of our problem. The girl was 1 to 3 mile Ronald.

"Better still I'll wait," I said. "What do you want to do?"

"Wait," she said. "I'll wait."

"Wait," she said. "I'll wait."
